welcome

Well, what can I say, the team and I have been amazed by the number of downloads of our BELLA magazine and we have received some fantastic response from our new and existing customers.

So, from myself and all the team at Parrys, I would like to say a big THANK YOU - your support has been incredible!

I am sure you will agree that life in Perth at the moment is both a curse and a blessing.

While our borders remain closed, many of us are longing for that elusive trip away, whether to see family or friends, visit a favourite destination or just purely experience a change of scenery. Personally, I am also slightly ashamed to admit that even plane food seems appealing.

On the flipside, a lot of us have made the most of the lockdown and taken the opportunity to spend time renovating our homes. For some it was a new driveway or garden, others fixed the roof or updated a fence, while many of you have made your old, tired floors look new and modern!

As such, a lot of people have turned to the team at Parrys for advice on the latest flooring products, styles and trends. I am proud to say that we have taken on this challenge by offering the best advice and ideas to help you make the right choice when it comes to your flooring.

Simply put, here are some general rules of thumb when thinking about your product of choice.

- Carpets offer warmth and comfort.
- Laminates offer a resilient wood look without blowing the budget.
- Timber offers class and increases the value of your property.
- Vinyls offer peace of mind and a huge range to choose from.
- And then we have Hybrid. The new kid on the block not only looks good, but is resilient, waterproof, practical, and so much more.

So, we hope you enjoy our summer edition of BELLA. Stay safe and we look forward to seeing you soon.

Enjoy our latest BELLA!

How to make your house look high-end on a budget

There's nothing like coming home to a house with a sophisticated design that reflects your unique style. If you want to give your home a makeover without splurging on a costly remodel, there are ways to revamp your space on a budget. You can achieve a luxury design with affordable styling techniques. Some inspiration is all you need to give your home a high-end feel without breaking the bank.

This guide includes helpful tips for how to make your home look expensive on a tight decorating budget.

6 Budget-Friendly ways to create a High-End Design

Designing on a budget can be fun and creative if you follow the right strategies. Test out these interior design upgrades in your space to achieve a luxurious look for less.

1. Start with a classic base

Neutrals colours and classic tones are the secrets to creating a space that lasts for years. Walls painted with a simple colour palette and traditional timber floors will never go out of style and will save you money on costly updates in the future. Taupe, grey, white, brown and black tones serve as the perfect base for any room.

A neutral colour palette will blend with any accessories to create a cohesive, high-end design. You can introduce fun colours and textures with pillows, art pieces and rugs. As your style changes, it's easy and affordable to swap out accessories. You can even update the colour palette to match your seasonal decor.

2. Upgrade your flooring

Your floors serve as the foundation of the entire room. The style of flooring you choose will impact your space's overall look and feel. While replacing your floor requires some effort, it's an affordable way to elevate your space and add value.

3. Create ambient lighting

The proper lighting should be functional and aesthetically pleasing. Overhead lighting will illuminate the room, but it can seem harsh and sterile. Placing several lamps around your space will create a warm and welcoming ambiance.

Lighting can add interest and detail to the room. Plain and simple lighting comes standard with any home. Replacing basic fixtures with more stylish options is an affordable way to make a noticeable impact. Adding a chandelier will create a focal point for a high-end look. Replacing your shades with a modern version can make any room feel luxurious.

4. Hang window treatments

When it comes to creating a high-end look, the details and finishing's make a significant difference. Drapes and curtains add texture and colour to the room for a polished look. Sheer curtains let sunlight through the window, creating a soft cast of natural light. Colourful or patterned curtains serve as a bold focal point. The fabric that you choose is equally as important as the placement.

Hanging your curtains from the ceiling will draw the eye upward and make the room feel taller and grander. Even if your windows are small, you can create the illusion of tall ceilings by installing your window treatments as high as possible. For a small investment, you can hang long, flowing curtains near the top of the wall to make your home look expensive on a tight budget.

5. Create an accent wall

Painting an entire room can add up quickly. Adding one bold wall will bring interest and drama to your home at an affordable price. Using a dark shade will add depth and give the space a high-end feel. It only takes a small amount of paint to cover a single wall, so this design hack is one of the most affordable.

For a less permanent option, peel-and-stick wallpaper comes in a wide range of colours and patterns at a low price. Temporary wallpaper adds a stylish flair to the space that can easily swap out to keep up with the latest trends. It can also hide minor imperfections in the wall for a sleek finish.

6. Add fresh flowers or houseplants

Interior spaces tend to feel incomplete without a few natural touches. You can literally add life to your home with fresh flowers or houseplants. They brighten up the room and add a natural element to your interior.

Beautiful flowers are a luxury that we often give as gifts. Dressing your home with fresh blossoms will create a high-end look for only a few dollars. If you are a gardener, you can try this method for free!

Houseplants are also an affordable way to add interest to your home. They come in many sizes and varieties that can elevate any design. Touches of green can change the feeling of your space. A living plant will give your home a sense of peace and balance.

If flowers are out of season or you lack a green thumb, faux options can achieve the same look. While they tend to cost more upfront, they will last forever without needing maintenance or replacement.

Talk to our flooring experts at Parrys, to take your first step toward High-End Design. At Parrys, our team of professional flooring experts can help you achieve the high-end interior of your dreams. Choose from a wide range of high-quality and affordable flooring options to upgrade your space.

We offer laminate, vinyl, timber, hybrid and carpets at competitive prices to help you maximize a tight decorating budget. We handle the entire process, from ordering the materials to performing the installation.

This guide includes helpful tips for how to make your home look expensive on a tight decorating budget.

A huge thank you to Derek and his team! The carpets look fabulous and I would not hesitate in recommending him to others. Outstanding service 🤝 went above and beyond, thank you.

Would recommend!

How to tell the difference between timber and laminate flooring

Is it Solid Timber or laminate? You might be surprised at how hard it can be to tell the difference. Today's laminate can look remarkably like popular solid timber floors such as Teak, Jarrah, Mahogany, Pine and Oak. Yet, there are a few ways to spot one type of flooring from another, especially if you look closely enough. Here's how to tell the difference between laminate and solid timber:

1. Solid Timber Shows Its Wear and Tear

When solid timber floors age, they can take on variations in colour and even texture. These variations can come from many sources, such as sunlight or water that's been left on the timber too long. Laminate, on the other hand, retains its pristine appearance for much longer because it's been engineered to withstand normal wear and tear.

2. Solid Timber Floors Often Have Scratch Marks

Notice a few scratch marks or even indentations in a floor that looks like wood? It's probably solid timber rather than laminate. Most solid timber types used in flooring are soft by nature. This softness can be attractive, and it makes the timber more susceptible to minor and major damage. Laminate is constructed to withstand the weight of normal objects being dropped or slid slightly across its surface.

3. Solid Timber Patterns Vary

Every solid timber plank offers unique characteristics, which means you shouldn't see many patterns in true solid timber floors. If you notice a lot of patterning and symmetry, you're looking at laminate and not solid timber. However, most laminate floors have been designed to repeat patterns in ways that look authentic rather than systematic.

4. Solid Timber Flooring May Have Nail Holes or Staples

Stapling and nailing are two ways craftspeople lay solid timber floors. You may notice these nail holes and staples at the perimeter walls, particularly with hardwood flooring in historic homes. Instead of using staple guns or hammers, laminate is clicked together using tongue-and-groove. This creates a smooth, seamless floor space.

5. Solid Timber Will Last a Few Lifetimes

Did you just buy a new house? Are you trying to figure out the difference between laminate and solid timber in a room or two? See if you can find out when the floor was laid. If it's older than 20 years and still has a solid look, it's probably solid timber. A well-maintained, properly installed with solid timber floor can stay beautiful for 75 years or longer. Laminates are more affordable to put into your home but will need to be replaced within a couple decades.

Is Solid Timber or Laminate the Right Choice for Your Home?

Now that you know a bit more about the difference between laminate and solid timber, you can pick the flooring type that makes the most sense for your lifestyle, decorating preferences and budget. Remember that solid timber will always cost more than laminate. If you're on a strict budget, you may want to evaluate solid timber versus wood laminate or hybrid.

Interested in seeing how laminate or solid timber or even hybrid would look in your home? talk to our experts at Parrys, and we'll be happy to show you a selection of flooring surfaces to help you add a finishing touch to your favourite spaces.

FAQ

What is engineered timber flooring?

Engineered timber flooring (also known as engineered hardwood flooring) is a magnificent product, and a great alternative to laminate and solid timber flooring. Unlike the synthetic components in laminate flooring, engineered timber has a natural, hardwood veneer finish. The middle and bottom layers of each plank is made of plywood, with each plank being a little bit thicker than laminate.

The best type of flooring for high traffic areas

New flooring is one of the best ways you can elevate and upgrade the look of your home. When choosing the type of flooring you want to use, the first thing you need to determine is the amount of activity each room sees.

Your home may see a lot of foot traffic coming through a main hallway into your living room or bedroom. It could be your kitchen or lounge spaces, or open dining area where people tend to gather. Some families have a rumpus room or plenty of rambunctious pets to contend with.

Knowing which areas in your home receive the most amount of foot traffic is important to determine the type of flooring you'll need. Exceptionally high levels of foot traffic require flooring that is sturdy, hard-wearing and will stand the test of time.

There are plenty of great options to choose from when it comes to the best type of flooring for high-traffic areas.

Carpet

Soft and cushiony underfoot, carpet is a wonderful way of bringing warmth and sweet comfort into your home. Carpet is relatively easy to maintain and can provide a luxurious feel to your rooms, especially when teamed with a great underlay.

Carpet is more likely to be subjected to wear and tear over time. Over the years it may discolour in the sun, stain from use, have pulled fibres from pet claws, end up pilling (depending on the style of carpet) or develop bald spots in high-traffic areas.

To ensure you get the most out of carpet in high-traffic areas, we recommend choosing high-quality, synthetic fibres that can withstand even the toughest corridors of your home.

Laminate flooring

One of the most robust types of flooring around, laminate is an excellent choice for high-traffic floorspaces. Laminate flooring is a great alternative to expensive, high-maintenance hard-wood timber, offering greater durability with the look and feel of timber.

Many people choose laminate planks for aesthetic appeal, exceptional durability and low-maintenance costs. Unlike hard-wood timber, laminate flooring does not require sanding or polishing as it contains a wear layer to protect the decorative and core layers underneath. However, once worn down or damaged, laminate planks require careful replacement.

Vinyl flooring

A highly popular choice for high-traffic areas is vinyl flooring. Whether choosing vinyl sheets or planks, vinyl looks luxurious, feels incredibly comfortable and is comparable in durability, look and feel to laminate.

To reduce the chances of damaging your vinyl flooring we recommend keeping pet nails trimmed, and having mats at all outdoor entrances to the home, to ensure that outdoor matter is captured before it is walked throughout your home.

Hybrid flooring

The best of laminate and vinyl, combined in one tough product. Hybrid flooring is made with cutting-edge technology, providing the look of hardwood timber flooring while being 100% waterproof, resilient to temperature changes, while being completely odour, scratch and stain resistant. More rigid than vinyl with UV-coating for high-impact resistance, hybrid flooring is an exceptional choice for high-traffic areas requiring the toughest of flooring solutions.

NEED HELP CHOOSING?

Contact our friendly staff and we'll help you find the right flooring product for your needs – whether it's a renovation or a new build, we've got all your flooring needs.

EXPERT TIP BY IAN MINOTTI

Did you know?

Using the wrong cleaners can damage your floor.

Incorrect usage of cleaning products is almost always the culprit of chemical damage to laminate floors. The wrong cleaner can dull the look of your laminate floors or worse, eat away the protective upper layers.

The Carpet Allergies: Best Carpets For Allergy Sufferers

A common myth surrounding carpet is the ‘allergy effect’ that it may cause in the home. We often hear customers saying they do not want carpet in the home because they are highly sensitive and allergic to them. But what are they actually allergic to?

Synthetic carpets, which outnumber sales of wool carpets significantly, do not provide a food source for biological growth, however, airborne biologicals can collect on these surfaces, as they can do on any flooring surface.

The problem in the home is the inadequate cleaning techniques that are used:

- Contaminated cotton mops.
- Ineffective maintenance procedures.

- If mops are not dried and disinfected correctly after use then hard surfaces could contain higher levels of biological contaminates.
- Cleaning carpets only when they ‘look dirty’.

Allergens that settle on flooring are only released into the air with the movement and shuffling of feet. It is interesting to know that studies have revealed that dust, lint and other dirt are held down in a carpet until they are vacuumed whilst the same does not go for hard surfaces where they can be kicked up and become airborne.

In summary it is worthwhile to vacuum your carpet regularly and have them professionally cleaned every 12-18 months to keep them looking fantastic as well as extending their life.

FAQ

Does having carpet in a house increase airborne dust levels, thus increasing risk to people suffering from asthma and other dust-related allergies?

It has yet to be proven that there is a significant increase in the levels of airborne dust between carpeted and non-carpeted homes. More significantly, there is a misapprehension that having carpet in the home will increase in the exposure to dustmite allergens when in fact there are a range of other triggers in the home that can increase exposure and cause a respiratory reaction.

The Carpet Institute of australiacarpetinstitute.com.au has provided an information sheet to assist consumers to better understand the issues related to Allergens in the home.

Investor guide:

the best low-maintenance flooring for rentals

For property investors, flooring is always an important consideration. The style, quality, feel and colour of flooring can significantly influence the attractiveness and rental return along with property resale value.

Yes, the cost of flooring installation and the complexity of ongoing maintenance are major deliberations for a landlord.

Many rental properties have a relatively high tenant turnover rate and might have a colourful mix of tenants over the years, including:

- students
- families with young children
- pet owners.

It often makes the most sense to go for a low-maintenance flooring option that will best enable you to maintain the quality and presentability of your property for years to come.

Style vs. ROI for low-maintenance rental flooring

With any renovation, refurbishment or new-build rental project, low-maintenance and hard-wearing options almost always make a lot of sense.

Flooring that requires complex maintenance – up to having to remove all furniture – make routine jobs between tenants more complex and expensive. And are tenants really going to care that much for your finicky floors?

When, however, you go for a low-maintenance option, it simplifies the cleaning and care job for tenants while minimising restoration or repairs to coordinate between tenancies.

The top low-maintenance flooring options we offer include:

- Vinyl
- Laminate
- Hybrid flooring
- Carpet

Yes – low-maintenance flooring can have luxury appeal

The quality and desirability of your home must match the level of rent you're seeking. High-end renters will expect a more luxurious feel ... which can cost much more to install. Meanwhile, a clean, presentable low-maintenance flooring type will easily satisfy a low-budget housing tenant.

You might think that carpet is always a good home option. It provides a warm, soft and welcoming feel and there are certainly attractive options for a relatively low up-front investment. However, carpets require regular professional cleaning.

Further, carpets are not always the best option for high-traffic areas – they simply wear out over time. And would you really want a carpeted kitchen, toilet, laundry or bathroom? Keep them for bedrooms and maybe living rooms.

To capitalise on the feel of carpet at an affordable price point, we suggest using a hard-wearing polypropylene carpet in the bedrooms and living areas. The rest of the house can be hard flooring.

Upfront flooring costs vs. durability

When you're selecting low-maintenance rental flooring, remember to stay pragmatic. Make the choice based on your investment goals. Ask yourself:

- Who is going to live in your rental property?
- What are their durability requirements?
- What is the value/expected value of the home?

The simplest flooring options to install are vinyl, laminate, hybrid and carpet. None of these require much preparation in "dry rooms". In rooms with plumbing, some waterproofing prior to flooring installation will be needed. And this means downtime.

Also, bear in mind that while tile and hardwood floors look appealing, they're usually the most difficult and expensive to install. In fact, tile is often heavy enough that it can only be placed on the ground floor of some two-storey properties.

Knowing the best low-maintenance flooring option for your rental property can be overwhelming. There are so many factors to balance.

Parrys is here to help. Our flooring consultants can show you through our complete showroom and discuss your rental flooring needs in-depth. Speak to us today.

" Got to say, I'm super happy with my decision to go with Parrys for my carpet install. Derek was extremely helpful through the whole process.

He was always happy to answer my questions with no BS and address any concerns I had (most of the concerns were of my own doing and related to my removal of the old carpet grippers due to a skirting board install).

Needless to say, on the day of the installation everything went super smoothly and the installer did an amazing job.

I'm super stoked about the whole job on top of the fantastic service provided by Derek.

Types of vinyl flooring for your home: sheets, planks or luxury vinyls

When deciding on vinyl flooring for your home you can choose between three different types: vinyl sheets, planks or luxury vinyl flooring. Each option has different features and unique characteristics and this guide provides guidance to help you decide which type best matches your project.

Vinyl sheets

Vinyl sheets come in a large roll a little like a carpet or linoleum. Sheet flooring usually covers the whole space without leaving any visible seams.

They are made of vinyl resting on a backing sheet of fiberglass and coated with some protected layers of polyurethane to make it even more resilient. Vinyl sheet flooring is fairly robust and can sustain a high amount of traffic. It is usually about 2.5 -3mm thick but can feel softer and warmer underfoot than wood or stone.

100% waterproof: vinyl sheets are waterproof and can be used in bathrooms and kitchens unlike vinyl planks which are only water-resistant.

Designs: they come in any color or pattern, some are designed to look like natural wood while others resemble natural stone or tiles. The designs below are from our All Seasons collection which features timber, granite and tile patterns

Affordable: this vinyl product is usually the most affordable solution as it can be mass produced into huge rolls without having to be cut into smaller pieces. You can find durable vinyl sheets that you can install yourself from as little as $23.75m².

Vinyl planks

The plank is made from vinyl and attached to an underlayer of fiberglass which makes it very rigid unlike a vinyl sheet, which needs to be rolled out making any rigidity impossible.

Thickness: vinyl planks come in different thicknesses including 2mm or 3mm. Thicker planks may cost more but could save you money in the long run as they will be more hard-wearing and are better suited to parts of the home that are prone to high traffic.

Designs: vinyl planks are usually designed to look like natural wood as they come in planks and lock together in the same way.

Pricing: you can find quality vinyl planks from $29.90 per square metre. As with everything, thicker planks will cost more but will last longer.

Luxury vinyl

Luxury vinyl is made up of multiple layers pressed together to create a very hard-wearing and natural-looking finish. The top layers include a scratch-resistant protecting surface over an image layer that holds the color and design. Beneath these are several layers of fiberglass, moisture-resistant backing, and an impact resistant core. Luxury vinyl planks usually come in a choice of 4.5mm and 5mm thickness.

100% waterproof: luxury vinyl planks are completely waterproof and can be used anywhere in the home.

Design: they look entirely natural and can be more hardwearing than wood or stone. Some are so resilient they are used in commercial areas.

Pricing: luxury vinyl flooring is the most costly option but also the most resilient which could work out cheaper in the long run. You can find luxury vinyl planks from $42.90 per square metre.

Parry's parting words

Whether you go for sheets, planks or luxury vinyl planks will depend on your project, budget and personal preferences. Each material has unique feature and you will need to have your end goal in sight while considering which best compliments your vision for the project.
