welcome

Another summer has come and gone, and it was definitely a warm one!

Hopefully you all had a safe and relaxing festive season and managed to get through another long round of school holidays unscathed. You may have even found some precious time to take a step back, relax and made some all-important plans for the year ahead. So, this year, why not do some planning for your number one asset – your home!

With our unique lifestyle coupled with a love for the indoors and outdoors, it is no surprise that our customers are taking the opportunity to explore our product range and chat to one of our Flooring Solution Specialists. Rest assured, each of our experienced team want nothing more than to help you find the best quality and priced solution to meet your individual flooring needs.

You may have noticed we have recently changed a few of our product ranges to keep up with the latest flooring trends and demands of our valuable customers. Here are a couple of the highlights:

- Carpets are still ever popular, with fit outs in bedrooms and theatres being the most common. Make sure you ask our Flooring Specialists about the long-lasting Solution Dyed Nylon range that we now carry in both cut and loop piles.
- Because of its waterproof quality, durability and easy-care maintenance, Hybrid flooring is rapidly becoming the flooring of choice for many. With our newly expanded range, we now offer you even more choice with a variety of board thickness, length and wear layers available.
- As the technology has improved, so has the popularity and Vinyl Plank has become fashionable once again. The choice in decors and colours is now unbelievable and definitely worth a look.

Lastly, I hope you enjoy our Autumn issue of Bella and that it inspires you to come down to one of our stores, have a chat and discover everything that we have to offer.

Enjoy our latest BELLA!

The latest flooring trends for 2022

'People's appetite for spending more time at home means they are being adventurous in their colours and choices'

The latest flooring trends are here for 2022 and now might be the perfect time to update your home with new materials, new methods and new moods.

It goes without saying that Flooring trends don't move as fast as designs in other areas of your home. Unlike things like paint colours, they are not something that get updated quite as regularly due to their longevity. But, as they can make the biggest impact to a space, it is pleasing to see that the new ideas keep coming.

Be bold and use vibrant patterns and bold colours.

This year, geometric designs don't seem to be going anywhere in a hurry and are still popular choices across both carpet and hard flooring. However, we are also seeing the emergence of interior design trends are that making a bold statement as people embrace vibrant patterns and bold colours. With their technology improving and popularity rising, Hybrid and Laminate flooring now have more options than ever, while carpet is making a comeback in living areas and theatre rooms.

We are seeing more and more hybrid flooring options

The rapid improvements in technology have revolutionised flooring across the board. This innovation, coupled with the wide range of options available has seen a resurgence in Laminate and vinyl and people are taking the opportunity to experiment with more unusual designs. Once seen as outdated, these materials are now back in vogue due to their design flexibility and durability. And, because the flooring is thinner, the floor level in the room isn't affected as much.

Selecting the right flooring

Selecting the right flooring for a home can impact the space's visual appeal and add an interesting and dramatic effect. If you are unsure as to what floor will best suit your property, here are seven tips to guide you through the selection process.

Style

Selecting the style of flooring based on the existing decor is a key step while making your decision. It is important to remember that the selected flooring must blend with the surroundings and overall design of the space. When determining a choice, make sure you select the material that complements your style, design and furnishings.

Space

One important thing to consider before selecting the type of flooring to be laid is the physical dimensions of the space. Shape and size of your room play an integral role in making the right selection and while a light shade can make a small room feel spacious, a darker one can bring compactness and warmth.

Practicality

Another key consideration while choosing the right flooring is the usage – e.g. what will your room primarily be used for and how often? For example, if the flooring will likely be in a high foot-traffic area like a living room, you should be looking towards options that are durable and long-lasting. And remember, the selected flooring should always merge with your home's existing elements.

Type

As mentioned, there are now a wide range of flooring materials available, and this often leaves people unsure as to what type is best. From hardwood to carpet and everything in between, the pure number of flooring choices provides buyers with mind-boggling options. This means that you need to have a clear idea as to what type of floor you want to install. After making this crucial choice, shapes and textures can be selected with confidence.

Maintenance

An important consideration while choosing the flooring is how much maintenance it requires (both in frequency and cost). An easy-to-maintain floor can be kept pristine with quick and easy tasks like mopping. These floors remain in a good condition with minimal effort and are ideal for those who don't have a lot of time to spare.

On the other hand, floors like timber often require high maintenance which can add to the expense and prove to be stressful to those who are time-poor or on a tighter budget.

Installation

Depending on the type, flooring can either be installed by a professional or you can opt for a pocket-friendly method by installing it yourself. For DIY flooring, laminate and hybrid floors are considered to be the simplest to install which can be an ideal choice for those who are budget conscious.

Budget

Like most of the products on the market, floors can be either relatively cheap or eye-wateringly expensive. That said, it is important to make sure you have a clear idea of your budget before diving into the trends.

The best allergy-friendly flooring choices

We have all heard the term 'Allergy Friendly', but did you know some flooring types can be the biggest source of allergens within your home? In this article we'll explore what are the healthiest flooring choices for you and your family.

If you or your kids have allergies or asthma, you may be aware that selecting the best type of flooring can have a big impact on the air quality within your home as many allergens can collect and get trapped in the floors.

'As a general rule, wool carpeting is the worst choice for allergies while synthetic carpet or hardwood flooring are regarded as the best.'

Ask most immunologists or allergists and they'll tell you that for people who suffer from allergies or asthma, carpeting can be bad news. While it may look fantastic and feel nice underfoot, carpet does have its downside. Not only does it harbor dust, pollen and other allergens, carpet also provides a perfect environment for mould and dust mites to grow. This, coupled with the fact that it is notoriously difficult to deep clean and can also emit Volatile Organic Compounds (VOCs) that can trigger asthma and irritate the eyes, nose and throat, it is no wonder that people are seeking more healthy alternatives.

That's where other flooring types come into their own and from timber to hybrid to laminate, there are myriad of healthy and stylish flooring options today. The key is deciding which ones best suit your look, your lifestyle and your budget. So, whether you're pulling up that old shag, have sanded that hardwood one too many times, or are finally losing the worn-out laminate, the big question is – what to put underfoot?

Best types of floors for those with allergies or asthma

Laminate, timber, hybrid and vinyl are ideal flooring options for those with asthma or allergies

Laminate, timber, hybrid and vinyl are alternative options that are perfect for those with allergies or asthma as they are easy to sweep and mop, yet don't attract dust mites or mould. But remember, not all floors are created equal! With some products, it is a case of 'you get what you pay for' as cheaper options may cause other unforeseen issues after a period of time, which can be an additional expense to rectify.

However, if you decide to opt for a Laminate or vinyl product, remember to select an option that has low VOCs (Volatile Organic Compounds) and be cognisant of the adhesive used.

Regardless of which flooring surface you use, it's important to keep the floors clean. Even solid hardwood, which is often the best choice, can result in sneezes or watering eyes if not kept fresh. Thankfully, cleaning is simple and dust that has settled on hardwood is far easier to vacuum or wipe away than dirt that is engrained into a carpet (here are some cleaning tips recommend).

What kinds of floors increase home resale value?

When you're renovating your property, either to rent it out or to prepare for immediate sale, Return On Investment (ROI) is a factor in almost every design choice. How much will you get back later for what you spend now? Just as much as upgrading paint, fittings and fixtures, the kind of floors you choose can have a big effect on resale value.

Funnily enough, it is easy to overlook the 'feature factor' of floors when you're renovating. Don't. Floors are the true constant in any home. Think about it: during inspections, interested buyers will walk into every single room of your home. They might touch a few walls here and there and take a look at the ceiling, but they will be standing on the floors at every single moment. Beyond initial visual appeal, the ongoing tactile influence of your floors is subtle, immediate and constant.

Generally, timber floors are the best match for Australia's superb weather. When considered against sandy places, such as beachside properties and most of Western Australia, floating floors often make more practical sense than carpet too.

What are the flooring trends?

Floor trends come and go, but there are underlying themes (pun intended) that endure. Foremost among them is consistency of flooring types. Simply, a home should have a unified flooring concept throughout. That doesn't have to mean one type of floor through the whole house. Rather, it means that the flooring solution matches room use in consistent ways.

For example, bedrooms – which are often carpeted for warmth, comfort and quietness – should each have the same carpet, thus bringing the interior concept together. One point on carpets: while once popular throughout entire homes, over the past 10 years they have been vanishing from dining rooms, living rooms, hallways and entrances.

This may be because hard floors suit high-traffic areas and also, in this era where home presentation is so crucial, they simply look more striking. Nevertheless, both wood and carpet are poor choices for the kitchen, laundry, toilet and bathroom, with their increased risk of spills.

Hard floors can boost resale value

You can see that hard floors make sense on balance, especially when you are unifying the look of a house. However, the choice to install hard floors still comes down to price, room usage, buyer expectations and time.

Making the dollars and cents call on whether hard flooring is the best among your other options – such as, laminate, hybrid, timber, vinyl planks and tile – is tricky. As usual, the best place to start is by talking to a few professionals, including estate agents, property valuers and flooring professionals such as us at Parrys.

Get a variety of advice and quotes. It is likely that hard floors will still emerge your winner, and you’ll have the added sense of security knowing that you have good evidence you’re making the right ROI choice.

EXPERT TIP BY IAN MINOTTI

Did you know?

Getting Coffee Stains Out Of Carpet

The process of removing coffee stains from carpet requires nothing more than some detergent solution, some undiluted white vinegar, and a little bit of patience. Dab the stain with some detergent, followed by some vinegar, more detergent, and then some lukewarm water. Be sure to press the carpet dry with a white paper towel in between each step

What is the BEST flooring if you have pets?

Flooring with pets

It goes without saying that Australians love their pets. In fact, a recent study found that while Australia has a human population of just over 25 million, there are almost 29 million pets in the country today.

Not surprisingly the pet that comes out on top of the leader board is 'man's best friend', the humble hound. While two in five households (3.6 million) own a dog, cats claw their way into second place, with approximately 2.7 million households playing servant to a furry feline.

Whatever your preferred pet, you can be sure that they won't always be the perfect house guest. Whether it be 'Smokey' dragging her half-dead prized mouse into your bedroom, or 'Buster' tramping his muddy paws over your lovely new Queens Twist wool carpet, your pets are certain to bring in unwanted mess.

Fact is that it doesn't matter how well trained your pet is – they don't hold a broom, can't reach for the mop and bucket, and cannot see what their claws and paws are doing to your lovely Blackbutt timber.

We know that no matter what stress your pets bring on a daily basis, you love them, and they love you. So, to make your life as easy as theirs, we have out together this simple guide as to what is the best flooring for pets.

Before you start

Firstly, when it comes to choosing household flooring that's pet-friendly, the most important things to consider and check off are:

- Durability
- Resistant to scratches
- Stain, moisture and odour resistant
- Easy to clean

That's where the following two styles of flooring can really assist you and your furry friend co-exist.

Vinyl Flooring

Vinyl flooring is one of the best cost-effective flooring options because it's extremely tough, waterproof, and highly resilient to wear and tear. Plus, as one of the easiest flooring types to clean and maintain, it remains a great option for allergy sufferers as hair and dander can be easily swept or mopped away. What's more, vinyl flooring is cool and comfortable for those pets that like lounging around, and as it is quiet underfoot, you won't be woken by your pet's midnight 'zoomies'.

Vinyl is also extremely stylish, and with a huge range of timber-look surfaces, textures and tones it is a fantastic, affordable alternative to timber floors

Laminate

Incredibly tough and scratch-resistant, it is no wonder that Laminate is one of the top flooring choices for households with furry friends. Laminate is a particularly durable and wear-resistant flooring choice because it has an additional external layer and resin coating. Laminate is also very 'low-maintenance' – it has superior stain-resistant properties and is extremely easy to clean.

However, it is important to remember that Laminate is top-layer moisture resistant. Unless cleaned quickly, moisture or puddles left to sit will be absorbed and may cause the flooring to swell and buckle.

When it comes to style, texture and designs, Laminate is also incredibly versatile with a wide range of looks and finishes. It has always been a popular option for pet owners and this trend will continue for some time.

If neither of the options above tick the box, you can also consider carpet.

PARRYS

Carpet

While it doesn't sound like a practical choice, there are now many carpet flooring products that are manufactured specifically for pets. In fact, carpet can be a comfortable, warm and cosy flooring option, especially if your pet is older or starting to feel arthritic.

While carpet will prevent slipping and scratching, it is important you choose a pet-specific range that features a moisture backing. Importantly, you will also need to consider pet proof carpet protection as in many cases, carpet can harbour fleas, hair or unwanted pests like ticks.

Carpet is a warm, traditional flooring option that can last many years with pets, however, it can have a short wear life and will probably need to be replaced every ten years or so. If you have your heart set on carpet, make sure you opt for a lower pile and look for options that are durable, stain resistant, and easy to clean.

Installing new flooring is an investment, so you'll want to find an option that both you and your pet will love. The right choice will make your flooring look neat and attractive for longer periods of time.

If you are unsure as to which product is best suited to you and your pet, make sure you talk to one of our professional team at Parrys.

FAQ

How Do I Fix Damaged Carpet Disasters?

Disaster #3: Your Carpet Has Stains. Chocolate: Use a dull knife to scrape away as much chocolate as possible. If the chocolate is melted, place a resealable plastic bag filled with ice cubes or an ice pack over the stain to harden the remaining chocolate before scraping, then vacuum the area to pick up any loose flakes or pieces. Mix 1/4 teaspoon of liquid dish soap with one cup of warm water, and use a clean cloth to apply the solution to the stain, working from the outside toward the centre. Leave the solution on for at least five minutes, then blot with a paper towel or a clean microfibre cloth until the stain is gone.

What to Look for when buying vinyl flooring

Vinyl is one of the many flooring materials available and if you are considering it for your new home or renovation, this article is for you. The material is made from Poly Vinyl Chloride (PVC), a form of plastic. It has many advantages including that it is very affordable, durable, water-resistant and is easy to clean. It is available in a huge variety of styles, textures and thicknesses. If you're thinking of giving your floor a new look, vinyl might be the right option for you.

Traditional, luxury or hybrid vinyl?

There are three main types of vinyl, namely: traditional vinyl, luxury vinyl and hybrid vinyl.

The common traits they all share such as being durable, waterproof, easy to clean etc. will vary from type to type. Each kind has a different constitution and structure and the production process for each varies so the characteristics they share will differ to some degree.

Traditional vinyl has a softer texture with cushioned backing and is soft underfoot while still remaining hard wearing and durable. It comes in sheet form for easy installation in most rooms and is also the most affordable option.

Luxury vinyl comes in different thicknesses and is in plank form. It has the ability to replicate the appearance of natural stone or timber, giving a more realistic look.

Hybrid vinyl is built for impact resistance and durability combining the best aspects of vinyl and laminate. It differs from traditional and luxury vinyls in that it's built with a rigid limestone core. This makes it very strong and extremely long lasting while still having the realistic look of the luxury planks

Vinyl sheets or planks?

Sheet vinyl, as the names suggests, comes in a wide roll that can be installed in large areas with minimal joins. While that is an advantage in some cases, it means that timber or stone look prints won't appear as realistic as planks. Nevertheless, they provide a very attractive look for people who are not driven to simulate a natural wood/stone floor cover.

Vinyl planks, on the other hand, require significantly more time to install as they must be placed piece by piece. However, they provide a very realistic appearance for those wanting the look of natural timber or stone.

So, how does vinyl stack up when compared to other flooring alternatives such as laminate, linoleum, cork, etc? As well as being soft and hard wearing, easy to clean and affordable vinyl is easy to install – great for DIYers and it comes in a virtually unlimited variety of styles, colours and patterns.

Parry's parting words

You will need to have your end goal in sight while considering which product best compliments your vision for the room, the durability you require and your budget.

We advise that you choose vinyl that has the right composition and traits to match your space and personal preferences. Make sure you do your due diligence on the different vinyl types mentioned above. Take your time. With so many vinyl variants available in the market, you are guaranteed to find exactly what you need.

Very happy with our timber vinyl sheeting that was laid this morning! Exact match to the rest of the house. The young guy who installed the vinyl sheeting... glued it down as request (another company wouldn't glue it down) cleaned up and took the old carpet away. Reasonable price as well. We will be back... just excellent service from the start!

Types of vinyl flooring for your home: sheets, planks or luxury vinyls

When deciding on vinyl flooring for your home you can choose between three different types: vinyl sheets, planks or luxury vinyl flooring. Each option has different features and unique characteristics and this guide will help you decide which type best matches your project.

Vinyl sheets

Vinyl sheets come in a large roll a little like a carpet or linoleum. Sheet flooring usually covers the whole space without leaving any visible seams.

They are made of vinyl resting on a backing sheet of fiberglass and coated with some protected layers of polyurethane to make it even more resilient. Vinyl sheet flooring is fairly robust and can sustain a high amount of traffic. It is usually about 2.5 -3mm thick but can feel softer and warmer underfoot than wood or stone.

100% waterproof: vinyl sheets are waterproof and can be used in bathrooms and kitchens unlike vinyl planks which are only water-resistant.

Designs: they come in any color or pattern, some are designed to look like natural wood while others resemble natural stone or tiles.

Affordable: this vinyl product is usually the most affordable solution as it can be mass produced into huge rolls without having to be cut into smaller pieces. You can find durable vinyl sheets that you can install yourself from as little as $23.75m².

Vinyl planks

The plank is made from vinyl and attached to an underlayer of fiberglass which makes it very rigid unlike a vinyl sheet, which needs to be rolled out making any rigidity impossible.

Thickness: vinyl planks come in different thicknesses including 2mm or 3mm. Thicker planks may cost more but could save you money in the long run as they will be more hard-wearing and are better suited to parts of the home that are prone to high traffic.

Designs: vinyl planks are usually designed to look like natural wood as they come in planks and lock together in the same way.

Pricing: you can find quality vinyl planks from $29.90 per square metre. As with everything, thicker planks will cost more but will last longer.

Luxury vinyl

Luxury vinyl is made up of multiple layers pressed together to create a very hard-wearing and natural-looking finish. The top layers include a scratch-resistant protecting surface over an image layer that holds the color and design. Beneath these are several layers of fiberglass, moisture-resistant backing, and an impact resistant core. Luxury vinyl planks usually come in a choice of 4.5mm and 5mm thickness.

100% waterproof: luxury vinyl planks are completely waterproof and can be used anywhere in the home.

Design: they look entirely natural and can be more hardwearing than wood or stone. Some are so resilient they are used in commercial areas.

Pricing: luxury vinyl flooring is the most costly option but also the most resilient which could work out cheaper in the long run. You can find luxury vinyl planks from $42.90 per square metre.

Parry's parting words

Whether you go for sheets, planks or luxury vinyl planks will depend on your project, budget and personal preferences. Each material has unique feature and you will need to have your end goal in sight while considering which best compliments your vision for the project.

" Got to say, I'm super happy with my decision to go with Parrys for my carpet install. Derek was extremely helpful through the whole process. He was always happy to answer my questions with no BS and address any concerns I had (most of the concerns were of my own doing and related to my removal of the old carpet grippers due to a skirting board install). Needless to say, on the day of the installation everything went super smoothly and the installer did an amazing job. I'm super stoked about the whole job on top of the fantastic service provided by Derek. Would not have any hesitation to use Parrys @ Belmont again 😊 "
